

Center for Distributed Learning

October 1, 2015

Dear Colleague,

Welcome to IDL7000, the advanced interactive learning course developed by the Center for Distributed Learning (CDL). This course has been established to support you, UCF online faculty, with enhancing your online or mixed-mode course.

During the next few weeks you will work with your course facilitators and your instructional designer to examine your course needs, review the resources available to you, and develop a plan to add elements to an existing or soon to be developed blended or online course. We are excited to offer this course to you and to promote CDL's collaboration with the development of your new online course components.

If there's anything you would like to discuss during your time in IDL7000, please contact your course facilitators, instructional designers, or me so that we can make sure IDL7000 and CDL are there for you and your course needs.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads 'Thomas Cavanagh'. The signature is fluid and cursive, with a large loop at the end.

Thomas Cavanagh, Ph.D.
Associate Vice President, Distributed Learning